

Confident you'll comply for the Royal Commission?

Not sure if your Aged Care business will be ready to meet the new Quality Standards on the 1st of July?

You're not alone

The Royal Commission into Australia's Aged Care sector is the single largest risk assessment this industry has ever seen. Facilities are under serious pressure to prove their commitment to high quality care, or they risk losing their license and shutting down.

While the majority of Aged Care businesses are already operating to the new required standard, the challenge lies in proving this with material evidence – especially within such a short timeframe. Where do you start?

Top 10 compliance areas

What can you expect from the industry-wide audit? We've narrowed down the top 10 ten areas of documentation you'll need to show to comply with the new Quality Standards.

- Key Personnel
- Residents' Documentation
- Re-accreditation
- Police Checks
- Staffing
- Missing Residents
- Fire Safety Declaration
- Compulsory Reporting
- Complaints System
- Records

How can I prepare?

Preparing for an audit of this scale (or any scale, for that matter) involves a huge amount of scrambling and manual work. Documentation that provides evidence for each of these areas is likely saved across numerous different systems and software – even hidden within personal drives. This makes it a frustrating and time-consuming process that eats up time and resources. The element of human error also makes it a risky one; a single document falls through the cracks, and your entire business is in trouble.

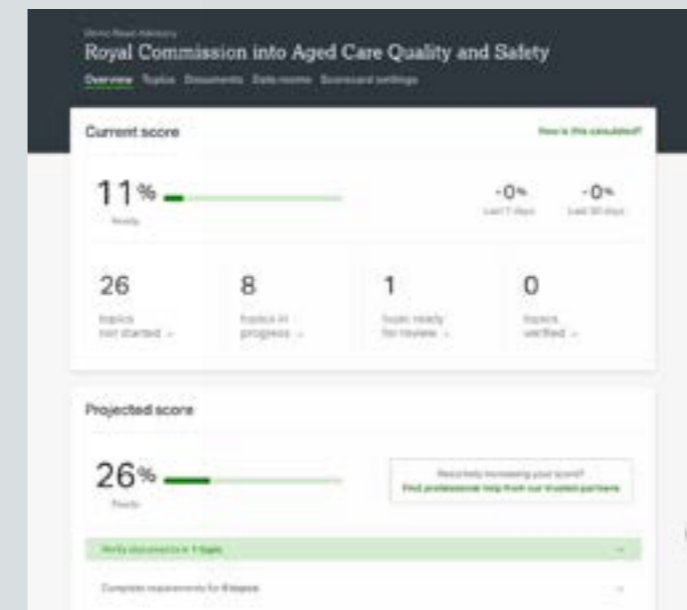

That's one option... but in this instance, you don't have the luxury of time to get your Aged Care business in shape. We're suggesting a much better alternative.

" 66% of surveyed respondents at our recent Aged Care event said they expected to put in 200+ hours to prepare for the Royal Commission, with half of those expecting to put in 1000+ hours."

The quickest path to compliance

These top ten areas are outlined in detail in Ansarada's Aged Care Compliance Pathway, a pathway within our platform that has been purpose-built to lighten the Royal Commission compliance burden. The pathway offers the simplest and quickest way to collaborate with your team and track your progress as you work toward the new regulatory standard.

- Efficiency: Empower your team to get the job done as fast as possible with pre-built workflows, notifications, app integrations and collaboration tools.
- Real-time state of play: Upload the required documentation and watch your score increase as you approach 100% compliance.
- One place to manage: Integration tools allow you to automatically sync files from disparate sources, like Google Drive or Dropbox, into one location with ease.
- Know your business: With a complete understanding of all your material information, there'll be nothing left to do on July 1 but put your best foot forward.

The pre-built pathway walks you through exactly what documents to upload and boxes to tick so you can reach full compliance faster, with significantly less cost and risk. Here are just a few of the benefits:

- Visibility: Know your blind spots and where to address risks before they have the potential to derail the process.
- Accountability: Assign your team to look after individual topics or areas so nothing falls through the cracks.
- Understanding: Know not just what documents to upload, but also what they are and why they are important to achieving compliance.

The good news?

The benefits of being fully prepared for this intensive audit don't extend only to senior Australians around the country.

After going through this process with Ansarada, your Aged Care business will be in its absolute best shape, and all your documentation housed in the platform for the next inevitable audit.

Undoubtedly, being put under the spotlight has drawn attention to Australian Aged Care, and the government is investing upwards of $5 billion into the sector over the next four years. Companies that are able to demonstrate their high-quality standards stand to gain everything in the new world.
